

Street Lights For New Lenox By End Of March

Because New Lenox is a newly incorporated village, the officers who were elected last Spring understood that their term would be only until the next regular election which will be this spring. Therefore a full ticket will be elected which will be a Mayor, six trustees, village clerk and police magistrate. Those serving now are: Mayor, F. Carlton Cole; trustees: Everett Merfeld, Leonard A. Rought, George F. Koeller, Jr., Howard Ayres, Walter Baers and Chas. Reeser and Maynard Brockman, village clerk.

Of the trustees, Geo. Koeller Jr., will not be a candidate for re-election as he and his family are expecting to move to Arkansas in the near future. There is no police magistrate.

This new board has done good work because they have been greatly handicapped in every respect. They have no money to operate, and cannot expect money from taxes until 1948. The only money they have had so far is the license money from taverns.

Beside setting up the village working arrangements, drawing up ordinances the outstanding result from this board's efforts, is the plan for street lighting. The Public Service Company has definitely promised that by the end of March, New Lenox will have their street lights.

Because of the inability to get material, the lights have been delayed, but the village board has been assured that material is now available for the 23 lights as scheduled, which will be a light at every other street corner, and as soon as more money is available and material, lights will be installed at the corners not now going to have a light.

The lights will be 250 candle power, some to be hung from wires in the middle of the streets, the remainder to be placed on wooden posts on street sides. The cost for these lights is to be financed from the tavern license revenue.

The first ordinance to be passed by the village was one limiting the number of taverns. The ordinance provides for one saloon for every 500 residents. There are three operating now in the village of about 1500.

Traffic regulation is another ordinance which the board has been working on.

Converting Life Insurance

Veterans' Service Bureau has received numerous questions concerning national service life insurance, how to convert when the first five-year level plan expires, and the cost of reconversion.

So for the information of all, here are some facts relative to this insurance for veterans of World War II.

The term plan provides only for insurance protection at a fixed rate and has no cash, loan or paid-up value. It provides the maximum amount of temporary protection at the lowest cost. These policies were originally issued on the five-year level, but the term has been extended for three more years, or eight years in all. Hence all term policies issued prior to January 1, 1946, may be continued in their original form for eight years from the date of issue. They need not be converted to a permanent plan before the expiration of that eight-year period.

Term policies issued after December 31, 1945, must be converted into permanent insurance within five years. Veterans' administration urges veterans to continue their term insurance during their readjustment to civilian life and to convert only after they have become reestablished and know what their financial capabilities and insurance needs will be. So every veteran has until October, 1948, at the least, to convert to a permanent policy and many considerably longer than that.

Term insurance may be converted wholly or in part to ordinary life, 30-payment life, 20-payment life, endowment at age 65, endowment at age 60, and 20-year endowment.

National service life insurance bears the lowest possible premium rates on all forms because the government bears the entire cost of administration and pays all losses traceable to the extra hazard of military or naval service. Every dollar in premiums is held in trust and invested at interest for eventual return in benefits to policy holders or their beneficiaries.

Approximately three million veterans have kept their insurance in force after discharge. More than ten million have let their insurance lapse, but they can be reinstated by paying only two monthly premiums and meeting health requirements. Terminal leave bonds may be used to pay premiums.

An example of the low premiums: At age 25 for the five-year level term, 67 cents per month per $1,000; ordinary life, $1.37 per month per $1,000; 30-pay life, $1.67 per month per $1,000; 20-pay life, $2.12 per month per $1,000; endowment at 65, $1.67 per month per $1,000; endowment at 60, $1.89 per month per $1,000; 20-year endowment, $3.48 per month per $1,000. Rates are higher as ages increase.

Questions and Answers

Q. My son enlisted for two years in the army on January 3, 1946, and was sent to the Philippines in July. In October he was court-martialed and sentenced to 28 months. Can you tell me if they can hold him after he has served his two years. And can you tell me the name of the secretary of the interior for the Philippines at Manila?—M.P., Lewistown, Pa.

A. Ordinarily a court-martial carrying a sentence of six months or over carries with it an automatic dishonorable discharge. It depends upon how the order was written as to whether he would receive his dishonorable discharge before or after serving his sentence, but in any case he would serve the sentence even though it goes beyond his enlistment. He may have been immediately discharged and is serving the sentence as a civilian. The secretary of the interior for the Republic of the Philippines is Jose Zulueta.

Q. I am a war widow with one child. My husband was killed in Germany two years ago. I got a widow's pension and insurance. If I should marry again will I still get the insurance?—Mrs. A. N. N., Richmond, Mo.

A. Yes, you will continue to receive your insurance but your widow's pension will be cancelled upon your remarriage.

Q. My father was in the Civil war and he died when I was 12 years old and I never drew any of his money. He was getting $100 a month and friends tell me I can get his back pay from the time he died until I came of age. Will you please advise me? I was the only child by his last wife.—Mrs. A.M., Cleveland, Tenn.

A. Suggest that you contact the nearest office of Veterans' administration. There are offices in Nashville, Chattanooga, Jackson, Knoxville, Memphis, Murfreesboro and Lawrenceburg.

LAST LOVER

BY Helen Topping Miller

Jill McFarlane, whose father, Richard, disappeared in World War I, falls in love with Lieut. Spang Gordon. She is upset when she discovers her brother, Ric, has fallen in love with Sandra Calvert, a divorcee of questionable character. Jill is thrown from her horse and hospitalized. During her absence, Richard visits her mother, Julia. He tells her he assumed the name of Captain Mackey and is stationed at the same camp as Ric. His father, John I., who has aided Julia in raising the children, denounces Richard. Julia is horrified at his callousness and refuses to tell her children the truth. At camp Captain Mackey tells Ric he knew his father in France during the first war.

CHAPTER XIII

He had to take care of her, Ric decided, she mustn't be hurt again. After the war when men had acquired equality again he'd look up Lieutenant Colonel Win Calvert and hand him a good jolt in the jaw.

In her own room Sandra Calvert shed her girdle with a relieved sigh. She'd done a stupid thing, letting Ricky see her in a morbid mood. Men don't like too much emotion in women, not unless it was directed at them. And dragging Win in had been the clumsiest move of all. She had so little time. Soon Ricky would be sent off to officer's school, and she hadn't money enough to follow him. Win would be slow with her alimony, of course. He was always slow. It would stop if she married again, of course. But she was not dubious of the future.

She was brushing her hair when the knock sounded on the door. Swiftly she shook the bright curls into a cloud around her face, picked up a jacket edged with fluffy white fur, and opened the door. Then she drew back, her face stiff with fury. "What do you want?" she demanded angrily.

Captain Roger Mackey quirked an eyebrow and smiled at her without mirth.

"Very pretty, Sandy. You were expecting somebody else, I infer?" "I was not! Go away before I call the house detective."

"I think I won't go away," he answered coolly. "I came to talk to you."

"You're not going to talk to me." Her face was livid. Her eyes blazed. "Get out of my door, or I'll telephone the office."

"I don't think you'll do that, Sandy. Stop being dramatic and let me pass—and shut that door."

"I don't entertain men in my bedroom, Rod Mackey."

"All right. I'll wait while you put on a coat or something, and we'll talk in the little parlor down the hall."

"And be overheard by a lot of soldiers and their dates? No, thank you. I'm not going to talk to you. We haven't a thing to say to each other. Get out now, will you?"

He cocked his head and looked at her insolently. "I have some things to say to you. If you don't want other people to hear them I suggest that you let me in and close the door."

"If you're seen coming in here I might be put out of the hotel!"

Mackey Pays a Social Call

"I think you're safe. No one saw me come down the hall." He walked in, shut the door firmly, and she backed away from him and put a big chair between them. "Sit down and relax, Sandy. After all, we're old friends."

"You were never a friend of mine, Rod Mackey. I came here to get away from everything that I hated. I was unlucky when they sent you to this post. I don't want to be reminded of anything that happened in the islands. Please go away and leave me alone."

"I'm not going to talk about old times," he said, amiably. "I'm going to talk about now. About you."

She flared at him. "No wonder they broke you! You are the most impossible, offensive person I ever knew."

His eyebrow flickered again, the mocking trace of a smile hovered over his dry mouth. "You don't do that dowager stuff very well, Sandy. Stick to the old army game. Swear if you feel like it. I won't mind. But I'm going to give you a few orders—now!"

"I don't have to take orders from you. I'm not in your command."

"You'll take these orders, Sandy Calvert!" He was grim now, his eyes were blue ice. "I want you to let that boy alone."

Her mouth curled scornfully. "Did they assign you to be a nurse to that squadron out there?"

"Take it easy, Sandy. You show your age when you blaze up like that. Very unbecoming, too. I'm not getting out till you promise to send that boy about his business and not see him again."

"What is all this about anyway?" she demanded shrilly. "I'll see Ricky McFarlane whenever I like, and you won't stop me!"

He took a cigarette from the pocket of his blouse, lit it elaborately, dropped the match in the wastebasket, looked at her levelly through the smoke.

"I think I can stop you," he said, coolly.

"Try to do it! It's none of your affair. Get out of here."

"You'll let young McFarlane alone, or he'll be called into my office for an interview," he said, icily.

"I see." She waited a little before she spoke. "Blackmail!"

"No blackmail. Just a brief airing of the truth, and you wouldn't know about truth, would you, Sandy? How old are you now, for instance?"

"I'm old enough to see through your rotten game! But if you think you're going to force me to start seeing you—"

"You flatter yourself, my dear. I was never in your little red book. I was Win's friend. I want nothing from you. Lucky for me, for there's nothing about you that any self-respecting man would want!"

Her features contorted, anger, hate and fear driving all the surface prettiness out of her face. Her skin took on a greenish cast, her eyes darkened and receded, behind a curtain of pure rage.

"Courage is a muscle of the mind."

"Your insults can't hurt me," she said. "I don't expect anything better from you. And I'm not afraid of your threats. But this interest in a young private—just a boy at your post, is a trifle amazing. It might be interesting if you'd explain why you're so concerned about Richard McFarlane, all of a sudden."

"There's no special explanation." He was watching her sharply, her quick shift of attack, which had not put him off guard. "I happened to know that boy's father in France. I know his family. His father was—my friend. I owe a debt to that family. I can pay it a little by saving that boy from a woman like you!"

She sat down in the big chair with a little, pitiful, collapsing movement. She looked small and undefended, she looked naive and helpless.

"What's the matter with me, Rod?" she asked. "Why are you so bitter against me? I'm not bad. I've never been bad. I've had a lot of heartbreak crowded into a few years. I was young when I married Win Calvert. He knew his way around in that wild set over there in the islands. I didn't. I had to grope. I made mistakes. I did stupid things. I made Win furious, but I wasn't bad. Win was bad. He was rotten. You know that. I was only foolish. And then after they sent us home, and I got back into a sane atmosphere again I saw how intolerable it had all been. I saw that I couldn't take any more. So I divorced Win, and he didn't care. I think he was glad. He was glad to be rid of me. Now I've met this McFarlane boy, and he's nice to me, I'm not harming him. There are women who could harm him, but when he's with me he's safe from them. You're threatening to call him in and tell him things about me. Can't you see how useless that would be?"

"I'm not going to talk about old times," he said, amiably. "I'm going to talk about now. About you."

She flared at him. "No wonder they broke you! You are the most impossible, offensive person I ever knew."

His eyebrow flickered again, the mocking trace of a smile hovered over his dry mouth. "You don't do that dowager stuff very well, Sandy. Stick to the old army game. Swear if you feel like it. I won't mind. But I'm going to give you a few orders—now!"

"I don't have to take orders from you. I'm not in your command."

"You'll take these orders, Sandy Calvert!" He was grim now, his eyes were blue ice. "I want you to let that boy alone."

Her mouth curled scornfully. "Did they assign you to be a nurse to that squadron out there?"

"Take it easy, Sandy. You show your age when you blaze up like that. Very unbecoming, too. I'm not getting out till you promise to send that boy about his business and not see him again."

"What is all this about anyway?" she demanded shrilly. "I'll see Ricky McFarlane whenever I like, and you won't stop me!"

He took a cigarette from the pocket of his blouse, lit it elaborately, dropped the match in the wastebasket, looked at her levelly through the smoke.

"I think I can stop you," he said, coolly.

"Try to do it! It's none of your affair. Get out of here."

that Bordine fellow before you married Win? Before you got that Mexican divorce? Were you a child bride? I think not."

Her eyes flashed viciously. "You cowardly snoop! Go ahead and peddle your tales if you think it will do any good. There are a few things I could tell about you, too."

"Nothing whatever that isn't known already," he said, coolly. "Nothing that could hurt me in the least, now."

"You tell Ricky McFarlane a lot of tales about me and see what happens! He won't believe you. He'll want to fight you, but he can't because you're twice as old as he is and you've got bars on your shoulders. He'll hate you. He hates you already. He told me he hated you."

"All privates hate their officers. It's the American in them, the fierce individualism in this country that makes men fight for equality, or for superiority. It keeps them trying. It's what makes this army one that no goose-stepping mob of regimented slaves can lick. Ric McFarlane doesn't hate me. He's thinking about the day when I'll be a captain and he'll be a major, and I'll have to salute him. It's good for them, that feeling."

"He hates you," Sandra persisted. "He won't believe a word you say."

He lit another cigarette. He was smiling now. He put on his cap, tilting it a little, his eyelids narrowed arrogantly.

"Want to gamble on it, Sandy? He may hate me. He may itch to hit me, but he'll believe me. Men don't lie to each other, often—not about women. Think it over."

He closed the door without a sound as he went out.

Sandra Calvert sprang to her feet, her hands tightened into livid fists. "You—you..." She choked on her fury.

Why, when there were hundreds of posts all over the country, had Rod Mackey been sent to Ridley Field? She had chosen the place because it was a small city, not too well known, and the living was cheap. She had followed the air corps because for so long her life had been bound up with it, and when Win left she had stayed because she liked being with men with wings on their collars. She had seen Mackey around but had kept out of his way.

She picked up the telephone, gave a room number, stamping her foot impatiently. Her face was set and bitter, with hard lines around her mouth. But her voice cooed.

"Ricky, did I wake you up? Darling, I'm so sorry! But I have to see you in the morning. Early. Oh, no, much earlier than that. By nine, at least. Ricky, you mustn't fail me. It's so terribly important—to us!"

Jill came back to Buzzard's Hill from the hospital, wearing a black sling and a pathetic face, and lay on a couch on the screened porch all day, indifferent to everything that went on around her.

She could not read, she complained, because she couldn't manage a book with one hand. "One-armed men do it," her grandfather told her. He went to town and returned with an elaborate contraption, a sort of book-desk with an elastic band to hold the pages of the book. But when he had arranged her favorite magazine on it and showed her how to turn the pages, Jill smiled at him wanly and pretended to read, but an hour later Julia noted that no page had been turned.

A Discussion About Jill
"If she'd get a letter from that army feller, she'd have a different face on her," John I. complained to Julia over his breakfast coffee. "But likely where he is, he can't even get a chance to sit down, much less write."

"I'm disappointed in Jill," Julia said. "Didn't I give my children anything at all, John I.? Anything but charming manners and average intelligence and good looks? I had courage. I wanted to give them courage."

"You never gave them courage, because you never gave them anything to fight or be afraid of. You did all the fighting yourself. Courage is a muscle in your mind. You've got to use it, or it gets flabby on you."

"What can I do with her? I can't send her back to school. She's lost interest in other men so parties bore her. She needs something to do when her arm knits, but what?"

"Plenty to do right here." "She isn't interested. She'd mope over it and carry that reproachful look around the house all the time. It's because she feels so unsure, so incomplete. If she'd married that young lieutenant—"

"My understanding is, he didn't ask her. Like as not she'll never see him again. He was so crazy to get into action that he asked for it, she said. That kind don't stay away from danger. They go looking for it."

"That's why he didn't ask her, perhaps. He seemed like a high principled lad. I liked him, but I wish Jill had never met him."

(TO BE CONTINUED)

NO OTHER winter season, no other Hot Stove League of Sport, has ever known as much discussion nor has seen as many headlines about gambling and bribery as the present winter. Almost every cure in the book has been suggested without covering much ground.

For example George Preston Marshall, owner of the Washington Redskins, suggests that all racing entries, odds and selections should be transferred to the stock market page, away from the sporting page—and that no odds or selections should be carried on football, baseball or basketball games.

"Racing is legalized betting," Marshall says, "but it is a financial proposition entirely, not a sporting proposition. It doesn't belong on a sporting page. In my opinion no one connected with college sport, professional football or baseball, in a guiding capacity, should ever be seen at a race track."

I can't see much cure in this. Racing has had no part in the scandals and bribery talk involving other sports. Cupid Black, former Yale football star, has a much sounder suggestion—

"I can see no harm," Black says, "in betting a hat or a reasonable amount with a friend on a football game. Or a fight. The trouble comes when you start betting with bookmakers, where a long array of even small bets can run into millions of dollars, which in turn can be used in the wrong way. I happen to love college football—every variety of football."

No Bets With Bookmakers

"I'd like to see everyone who loves football, who believes it is a great game refuse to make a bet with any bookmaker or any other professional gambler. No one is going to stop the betting on football or any other game. But we can wreck the gambling professionals if we leave them out. This would eliminate the big sums these bookmakers handle. There is always somebody to bet with, apart from the professional gamblers."

This is a sound suggestion. There will always be the cheaper sort of humanity who will still place their bets with the bookies. But the list can be cut down.

The stumbling block is human nature, the selfishness of what a top philosopher has called "the so-called human race." All through the fading winter, a large part of the headlines on sporting pages have been concerned with stopping the gamblers. If most of those, who feel they have to bet on games will only bet among themselves and leave the gamblers out there would be no problems of bribery or crookedness.

This will be impossible to stop in racing, since racing is legalized gambling or legalized betting in 26 or more states. But football, baseball, boxing and basketball still have their thrills apart from any betting angle. Those who happen to like or love these games can solve the problem quickly along the lines suggested above.

Majority Are Honest

There are more than a few kinks in sport, since it is conducted by human beings. But its general average, in the way of honesty, is still well above politics, labor unions or what is known as big business. I don't believe anyone will try to dispute this statement.

The point is that the public at large demands a far higher honesty average from sport than it demands from politics or business or labor unions. The public expects its sports to be completely clean, not nearly clean. Amateur bettors are not going to try to fix anything. Only a few professional gamblers will. But these few can wreck a sport if not suppressed in one way or another. The suppressing part isn't as simple as it sounds. But at least a heavy curb can be developed. After all the publicity that has covered the sporting pages, any athlete from now on who doesn't report an attempted bribe is either a completely dumb or a completely dishonest person.

The terrific amount of money that has come into sport was sure to set the chisellers and crooks to work. Whatever happens, the directing heads of every sport will have to redouble any past efforts in the way of vigilance and guardianship.

Baseball's Major Shifts

The two major shifts of the year in baseball belong to the game's strongest offensive player and the game's best defensive player. This means Hank Greenberg's shift to the Pirates and Joe Gordon's move from the Yankees to the Cleveland Indians.

Even at the age of 36, many years away in the service, Greenberg was lucky enough at bat to lead Ted Williams in home runs and runs batted in.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of Arnold Bertelsen who passed away two years ago February 27, 1945:

Sad and sudden was the call
Of one so dearly loved by all;
A bitter grief, a shock severe
It was to part with one so dear.
I often sit and think of you
And speak of how you died;
To think you could not say Goodbye
Before you closed your eyes.
God, hold your loving arms about him,
Keep him in your tender care,
Make up for all he had to suffer
And everything that was unfair
I do not know what pains he bore
I did not see him die
I only know he went away and Could not say Goodbye.
With God's help I hope and pray that
We will meet again some day.
BERTELSEN FAMILY.

Agriculture-Industry Dinner Meeting

The first meeting of its kind to be held in Will Co. took place Monday evening Feb. 24 at 6:30 when about 150 representatives of agriculture and a like number of Joliet business men met at a dinner in the Elk's ballroom. Sponsors were the Joliet Association of Commerce and the Will Co. Farm Bureau.

Appearing on the after-dinner program were Fred Herndon of McComb, McDonough Co., farmer and president of the Illinois Farm Supply Co., who talked on "What's Ahead for Agriculture," and John L. McCaffrey, president of the International Harvester Co., whose topic was "What's Ahead for Business." Following these talks there was an open forum with other prominent farmers and businessmen.

It will culminate the membership contest which has been in progress since Nov. 1 between Groups A and B of the organization. From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

Bert Solves
the Labor Problem

You hear a lot about capital and labor nowadays, as if the two could never get together. But look at Bert Childers—who has 320 acres of producing land, a fair-sized herd of cattle, and two farm hands working for him.

If you called Bert a "capitalist" he wouldn't know what you meant, and neither would Spike and Sandy, the hired men. Bert works side by side with both of them; and in the evenings they sit around the fire together—sharing a friendly glass of beer or two.

If anybody has a beef—whether it's about wages or hours or equipment—they talk it over at those friendly evening sessions.

I don't say all labor problems are as simple as Bert's. But from where I sit, the basic principle applies to any farm or factory or business: A principle of confidence and mutual respect, of daily talks together in a friendly and congenial atmosphere.

THE SUN AND ITS WORK

The sun is a star—a huge furnace of glowing gases so hot that we could not approach it within millions of miles without being burned to a crisp. Its surface temperature is about 11,000 degrees F., hotter than any temperature ever produced by man, and the temperature down in its depths is higher than any temperature ever measured. If the sun were as close to us as the moon, the water of the oceans would boil away and the earth would melt.

Nothing on the sun is solid. Such intense heat turns all liquids and solids into gases. Over the sun's surface these gases whirl and seethe into monstrous storms, often sending out streams of white-hot gases thousands of miles high. Astronomers believe that the sun gets much of its heat from the contracting of these gases; it does not actually burn like a bonfire. People sometimes wonder if the sun will grow cold, for it is cooling slowly, but the enormous length of time that must elapse before there is any difference in the earth's temperature is beyond man's imagination.

The sun is a star of average size. It appears to be larger than other stars because it is closer. It is approximately 93,000,000 miles from us while the next nearest star is almost 300,000 times as far away as the sun. An airplane traveling 150 miles per hour would take 70 years to go from the earth to the sun. The sun's diameter is 860,000 miles—109 times the diameter of the earth. A million "earths" could fit inside the sun. It is larger than all the planets put together.

The gravity or "pull" which the sun exerts is tremendous because of its size. A man weighing 100 pounds on the earth would weigh more than two tons on the sun. This "pull" holds the earth and other planets in a certain distance from the sun. The planets revolve around circular paths with the sun as the center.

Does the sun really "rise" and "set"? It does not go up or down nor does it turn its light off and on. It unceasingly lights one half of our earth. As the earth rotates, the side on which we live swings into and out of this lighted area, receiving alternately night and day.

Our seasons depend on sunshine. Winter is cold since the short days give us less sunlight and the sun's rays reach us on a slant. Slanting rays produce less heat than direct ones. You can set a paper on fire if you focus the sun's rays with a magnifying glass directly over one spot; but if you tip the glass slanting the rays over fifty times as much paper, the rays will not give enough heat to produce fire.

Heat will not travel 93,000,000 miles, so the sun does not send us heat such as we can feel. It sends radiant energy which turns to heat when it strikes rough or dark materials. The earth receives approximately one-half of one billionth of all the sun's radiant energy but even that small amount makes life possible on earth.

Sunshine gives green plants energy with which to manufacture food. They take materials from the soil, and water and air, and with the help of a green substance called chlorophyll, manufacture sugar and starch, some of which they store in their roots and stems and leaves. Animals eat plants, and we eat animals and plants to

County Poultrymen Eligible To Enter County Contest

Will County poultrymen will compete with poultry breeders in 10 north central states in the 1947 phase of the nationwide Chicken-of-Tomorrow program with more than 2,500 poultry raisers from this county eligible to enter the competition, according to D. D. Slade, chairman of the contest committee.

"All that is required for Will County poultrymen to become a part of this important breeding program is a flock give us life and energy for our work and play. The ultraviolet rays in sunshine can prevent certain diseases if it shines on our bodies. Sunshine also helps to kill many harmful bacteria.

Most of the energy on earth comes from the sun. It evaporates tons of water, forming clouds and causing rains which enlarge rivers used to run dynamo for producing electricity. Coal and wood, fuels which help to run machinery are made of plants that trapped the sun's energy.

of 50 baby chicks hatched between May 4 and 10", Slade said. "Poultrymen entering the contest are urged to contact Cliff Carpenter, president of Institute of American Poultry Industries, Chicago, chairman of the contest committee in this state."

Aimed at developing chickens with improved meat-type characteristics, the contest carries a $5,000 grand prize in 1948 provided by A & P Food Stores and $5,000 in regional prizes. The top award will go to the poultry breeder who develops the most improved meat type chicken.

The importance of poultry farming in Will County, Slade said is reflected in the latest report from the Census Bureau which shows that 90 per cent of the county's farmers received income from poultry.

Beer Legalized

The Cullen-Harrison bill, which was the modification of the Volstead act to legalize and tax beverages containing 3.2 per cent alcohol by weight, was signed by President Roosevelt on March 22, 1933. On April 7, of that year, beer and wine of that content became legal.

There's a place for YOU in the 4-H parade!

JOINING THE RANKS of the 35,000 boys and girls who are members of Illinois 4-H Clubs is a pleasure and a privilege for young and old alike. Membership in this world-wide rural organization provides both parents and children with many advantages. It provides an opportunity to participate in clubwork that teaches skills and knowledge of permanent value. It teaches community leadership, gives them experience in democratic living, and fills the need for wholesome recreational and social activities.

Another National 4-H Club Enrollment Week is here. Parents are urged to encourage their children and other children to join the local 4-H Club. If there is no local club, a group of five or more is all that's needed to start one. Perhaps you can serve as its leader or help secure 4-H for your community. Don't miss this chance to voluntarily act as friend and counselor to Young America.

Rewards for 4-H Work are many and varied. Picnics, camps, trips and outings are only a few. Each year state winners, like the group above, are chosen to attend the annual National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago where they vie with winners from other states for National Honors.

Recreation and Responsibility come with the social activities and business meetings which are held at regular intervals by the 4-H Clubs and their nearly 1,700,000 members. Here the happy Sandy Ford Jr. display a few of their domestic projects at the LaSalle County Home Economics Show.

Livestock Projects are favorites with thousands of 4-H'ers like Phil Firkin and his assistant club leader, John Olson. Competition at 4-H Club Fairs provides fun and frolic... brings about livestock improvement... helps establish business contacts that will be of help in the future.

Head, Heart, Hands, and Health team up to make an unbeatable combination wherever 4-H'ers like the Flanagin Hustlers meet. Rural boys and girls between ages of 10 and 20, in a group of 5 or more, perform specific farm and home duties under the supervision of a local 4-H Club adult leader.

ANNUAL APPEAL

Red Cross Campaign Seeks Funds To Continue Wide Scope of Work

WNU Features.

With activities keyed to the times, the American Red Cross March 1 will begin a month's appeal for funds with which to operate in 1947-48. A fund goal of 60 million dollars has been set after careful calculations of Red Cross needs. By proclamation of President Truman, March will be observed as Red Cross month.

The 3,000 men and women still serving overseas with the Red Cross are helping with morale and welfare problems of members of the American armed forces in occupation zones. Four thousand more are serving the army and navy in this country, providing recreation, counsel and assistance in service hospitals and other installations.

In addition, thousands of men and women are giving Red Cross service as chapter executives, home service directors and Red Cross staff workers in veterans' hospitals and regional offices. Another million and a half American women give volunteer services as canteen workers, motor corps drivers, nurse's aides, hospital and recreation workers, staff assistants, home service workers and production workers.

Assist Veterans.

All of the March goal and more will be used in the coming year for maintenance of present Red Cross services to the army and navy veterans, and the community, Basil O'Connor, national chairman, says.

Through the war, through the emergency period and now in the first full peacetime year, the Red Cross has served the American people on an expanded scale, he continues.

Now, although activities are being realigned according to needs of the armed forces and of veterans' and civilian services, the Red Cross is maintaining a full-scale program for 1947-48.

Home service, the program of family service through which the Red Cross carries out in local communities a fivefold charter commission, will be needed on a greater scale than ever before, trends indicate. After World War I, this work continued to increase for almost three years. Then 4,749,000 were served. World War II armed forces totaled some 13 million men and women, and demands on Red Cross chapters are expected to be correspondingly higher.

Services in army and navy hospitals, where the Red Cross lends a hand to troubled patients, will be continued, O'Connor says, as will services to veterans' hospitals through field directors, volunteer special services and community service to camps and hospitals.

Aid Disaster Victims. During 1946, the Red Cross assisted in 205 disasters in the United States and insular possessions, and is prepared to do an equal or larger job in 1947, O'Connor says.

Red Cross activities in the health and education fields also will be heavily emphasized during the year, the chairman adds. Home nursing, nutrition, first aid, water safety and accident prevention classes conducted by Red Cross chapters throughout the nation will take their place in the return of each community to progressive peacetime living. Through the Junior Red Cross, America's elementary and high school boys and girls will give service to the community.

"During the war and through the emergency period, the American people expressed and re-expressed their faith in the Red Cross through volunteer assistance and generous annual contributions," says Chairman O'Connor. "I am confident that Americans everywhere again will show their confidence in the Red Cross during the March campaign."

Grateful Pedestrian Rewards Bus Driver

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA. — Because a pedestrian was grateful for a smile and wave of the hand, Lee N. Burke, Oklahoma City bus driver, has been enriched by $20. Burke stopped his bus and waved on the bewildered pedestrian, caught in traffic when the light changed. The man took the license number of the bus, then sent the money to the driver.

Hike Potato Sales By New Packaging Paper Bags Provide Ideal Retail Units

Millions of pounds of potatoes are getting a new ride to market this year.

They are riding in new paper bags, made of "wet strength" paper which absorbs moisture without breaking. They are going in 10, 15 and 50 pounds quantities which retail stores can sell immediately without further sorting, sacking or handling.

Wet strength paper bags meet with consumer acceptance.

At one time, not so long ago, all grades, sizes and quantities, including culls, were shipped in burlap bags. Merchants had to sort and package the vegetables. Today an ever-growing number of shippers are pre-packaging potatoes in the new paper bags. This means a little more work, but it pays in providing a better-selected, higher quality and more uniform product. The store gets clean, graded potatoes packaged in retail-size bags which can be sold at once.

Wet strength paper was developed before the war but its merchandizing potentialities were not utilized until this year.

Self-Regulating Vent

A ventilator for barn, poultry house or other outbuilding should be arranged so that snow, rain or cold will not beat in. An ideal type is that shown in this drawing. It can be made to fit any size or type of roof.

KNOW YOUR BREED Cheviot By W. J. DRYDEN

Cheviot sheep are one of the oldest purebred varieties in the world. Prolific, hardy, with little oil in their wool, they produce an exceptionally high class of fleece.

The mutton may be classed as among the very best. It contains about the right degree of fatness and is high in grain and flavor.

A beautiful breed, with fleece from 4 to 5 inches long in one year, and rams clipping between 8 and 10 pounds, it has proven its worth as a general purpose sheep. According to breed standards a mature ram in good flesh should weigh 185 pounds or more and a mature ewe, 140 pounds or more.

Keeping the Farm in The Family Forever

Thousands of elderly farmers carried on while their sons were fighting the war. Many of them now are seeking a way to retire and transfer their farms to younger hands. Those retiring farmers want to be fair, both to the son and to his brothers and sisters. Today's swift-moving events demand that farm property arrangements be kept sound and continuous for the welfare of nation and family.

Splendid Cough Relief, Mixed In Your Kitchen

Saves Big Dollars. No Cooking. Yes, ma'am, right in your own kitchen, you can easily mix a cough medicine that is a wonder for quick results, and gives you about four times as much for your money. And it's no trouble—a child could do it. You'll need a syrup. Make it by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. No cooking needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Now get 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex from any drugist, and pour it into a pint bottle, and fill up with your syrup. There you have a full pint of remarkable medicine for coughs due to colds. It lasts a family a long time, and tastes fine—children love it.

You'll say it's hard to beat, for real relief. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages. Eases the soreness, and lets you rest at night. Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well known for quick action on throat and bronchial irritations.
